About this document. This Career Pack turns my personal facts sheet into a clear picture of who I am, what I can do and where I am headed. It also holds my summaries of three NPTEL soft-skills lectures and my English test results. Nothing here is invented: where I have no achievements or experience yet, the section says so and shows my plan instead.

01 About Me

Who I am and what I am working toward

I am Jason Jacob M, a first-year CSE student at St Joseph College of Engineering, OMR, Chennai (batch 2026-2030). I learn quickly, work hard and take responsibility seriously. I enjoy coding and am currently learning C and Python. Outside study I like carrom, dancing and joking with friends. My main challenge is that I often have many doubts while learning, and I manage this with a structured routine (Section 06).

Long-term goal	Company Manager
Reason for choice	Job security

02 Career Goal: Company Manager

Why management, and what I need to get there

A company manager plans work, organises people and resources, makes decisions and tracks results so that a business reaches its goals. Every industry needs managers, which is why I picked this path for its job security. As I grow I hope to add deeper reasons, such as building strong teams and solving real business problems.

Technical credibility

A CSE degree helps me understand how software is built and judge what timelines are realistic.

Problem-solving

Coding trains me to split big problems into small steps, which is the heart of project management.

Skills to build

Time management, communication, leadership and teamwork, through the English lab, clubs and hackathons.

Programming languages	C, Python (both currently being learned)
Tools / software	Visual Studio, Lovable, ChatGPT
Topics to ask me about	C coding: program structure, data types, input/output, conditions, loops, functions, arrays, strings and introductory pointers

C gives me solid fundamentals in memory, loops and functions, and Python lets me turn ideas into working programs fast. I use ChatGPT as a learning aid to clear up doubts.

04 Projects

Activities and development goals

- Aim for recognition through a hackathon.
- Consider an introductory C or Python course and a business English course.
- Attend a workshop and a hackathon this year.
- Join a college club and volunteer at an event.

Fixed vs growth mindset

Fixed mindset	Growth mindset
Avoids challenges	Welcomes challenges
Resists change	Embraces change
Focuses on limits	Looks for opportunities
Rejects criticism	Values feedback
Stays in the comfort zone	Explores new things
Thinks effort is futile	Learns from failure
Believes nothing can be done	Believes everything is possible
Stops learning after college	Keeps learning for life

What I take from these lectures

Growth mindset

Treat my doubts and first-year challenges as chances to grow, not as limits.

People skills

Build listening, communication and conflict-handling skills, which every manager needs.

Habits

Finish what I start and replace bad habits with good ones, supporting my daily coding routine.

09 Four-Year Career Plan

From first year to first job

Year	Focus	Key actions
Year 1 (2026-27)	Learn some hackathon concepts, improve in other subjects, learn other languages, build coding skills	Daily C and Python practice; GitHub mini-projects; attend a hackathon or workshop
Year 2 (2027-28)	Learn more programming languages such as Python and C	Data structures; larger team projects; join a club
Year 3 (2028-29)	Placement training and interview preparation	Aptitude and coding tests; resume; mock interviews
Year 4 (2029-30)	Job employment and internship	Internship; campus interviews; first job

A realistic route to company manager is to start as an engineer or executive, take on team-lead duties, then move into management.

10 Career Hero: Sundar Pichai

A technical foundation that led to leadership

Sundar Pichai was born in Madurai, Tamil Nadu, grew up in Chennai and studied engineering at IIT Kharagpur. He joined Google in 2004, worked on products such as Chrome, and became CEO of Google in 2015 and of Alphabet in 2019. I admire his hard work, talent and role in IT.

He shows that a technical foundation can lead to leadership, that consistent effort matters more than sudden success, and that where you come from does not limit where you can reach.

12 Education and Career Development

Additional profile fields and a practical path toward management

Program	B.E. Computer Science and Engineering
College	St Joseph College of Engineering, OMR, Chennai (as recorded in my original profile)
Batch / year	2026-2030 | First Year (2026-2027)
Student ID	26CS112
Class / section	CSE C
Focus areas	Current: C and Python fundamentals. Planned: data structures, algorithms, logical reasoning and problem-solving.

Technical development and professional strengths

Current foundation: I am learning C and Python. I learn quickly, work hard and take responsibility seriously. Development priorities: practise analytical thinking, write clear and well-documented code, test programs, and explore web technologies and additional languages as my fundamentals improve.

Professional habits to build: adapt to new tools, work respectfully in a team, communicate progress, meet agreed deadlines and focus on quality. These habits support both software work and my long-term management goal.

Career roadmap by stage

STARTED	Began the B.E. CSE degree and first-year learning.
IN PROGRESS	Build foundations in C and Python; practise coding and improve English.
NEXT GOAL	Complete practical projects, publish clear GitHub documentation and gain teamwork experience through clubs and events.
LONG TERM	Graduate, begin in an engineering or executive role, take on team-lead responsibilities and progress toward company management.

Future goals

In the near term, I want to strengthen my programming fundamentals, build a useful project portfolio and become more confident in English. Over time, I want to develop technical judgement, planning, leadership and teamwork so I can take on greater responsibility.

Personal statement

I want to earn responsibility through steady effort and useful work. I will ask questions, learn from mistakes and improve step by step. My aim is to combine a strong technical foundation with clear communication and dependable teamwork as I work toward becoming a company manager.

“The expert in anything was once a beginner.”

14 Additional Soft-Skills Learning

Further points from the coursework coverage in the reference portfolio

Learning through behaviour and habits

Learning should lead to a lasting change in behaviour across physical, mental, emotional, social and spiritual development. In conflict, explain the underlying need and look for a win-win outcome. Stress can be understood as a mismatch between demands and available resources. The habit sequence links thought, action, reward, habit and character.

Communication in practice

The five Ps of email are planning, preparedness, persuasiveness, presentability and perseverance. Set aside phone-free time. Prepare presentations by knowing the topic, rehearsing, using three or four main points, choosing simple visuals and ending positively. Reading practice can combine skimming, scanning, grouping words and close reading.

Further study

Explore Carol Dweck's Mindset: The New Psychology of Success and the talk The Power of Believing You Can Improve. Apply the lesson by treating feedback and mistakes as opportunities to improve. These are suggested next resources, not completed study.

“Circumstances do not make a person, they reveal him.”

15 Additional Career Inspiration

Addy Osmani | Learning through building and sharing

The reference portfolio includes Addy Osmani as an additional example for CSE students. Its profile describes an early C++ browser project called XWebs, work on Chrome and developer tools at Google, and contributions to web performance, developer experience, technical writing and AI-assisted development.

It also records a move to Anthropic in 2026 as a Member of Technical Staff working in the area of Claude Code. This is presented as information from the supplied reference portfolio; current employment details have not been independently checked.

Lessons I can apply

Start with small programs, understand the fundamentals, experiment with real projects, learn from mistakes and share useful knowledge. Tools change, so problem-solving and continuous learning remain valuable. Sundar Pichai remains my main career hero, as described in Section 10.

“Build, learn, experiment, and keep improving.”

13 Career SWOT Analysis

A planning view of the CSE-to-management pathway

This career-level analysis complements my personal SWOC in Section 06. It identifies areas to consider as I build technical experience and prepare for leadership.

Strengths | Internal foundation

- C and Python learning can build a useful base for technical problem-solving.
- Quick learning, hard work and responsibility support consistent development.
- A clear management goal gives direction to technical study and people-skill practice.
- Software projects can demonstrate useful work and provide opportunities to practise planning.

Weaknesses | Internal development needs

- As a first-year student, I still need deeper programming, data-structure and algorithm knowledge.
- Frequent doubts can slow my progress unless I record and resolve them systematically.
- I need to strengthen English communication and balance theory with practical work.

Opportunities | Areas to explore

- Use GitHub and open-source learning to build a public record of progress.
- Explore AI, cloud and web development as future learning directions.
- Use internships, hackathons, college clubs and team projects to gain experience.
- Explore different industries and working arrangements as my skills and interests develop.

Threats | External risks to plan for

- Competition for entry-level roles and changing hiring conditions can affect opportunities.
- AI-assisted coding and changing tools require continuous learning and sound judgement.
- Technical knowledge can become outdated without regular practice and upskilling.
- Work pressure can affect wellbeing; realistic planning and work-life balance matter.

My response

Follow a regular study routine, complete small projects, practise communication, seek feedback and review my career plan each semester. Build demonstrable skills before seeking greater responsibility.

READING ASSESSMENT

Outread | Reading speed and comprehension

Current Test Results

READING SPEED

406

Words per minute (WPM)

COMPREHENSION

100%

Questions answered correctly

Result interpretation

The result shows a reading speed of 406 words per minute with 100% comprehension on this passage. This is a passage-specific estimate, not a standardized assessment or ranking.

Learning takeaway

I was able to read quickly and recall the details tested. To build consistency, I will practise with unfamiliar passages and compare both speed and comprehension across multiple attempts.

15 Summary of Interchange Exercises

Reflection on what I learnt from the Cambridge Interchange activities

I learnt to speak about earlier events with better clarity and confidence.
The activities helped me notice how verbs change when an action is already completed.
I practised describing where people were, what they did and how situations were different before.
Working with everyday examples made it easier to understand the meaning of sentences.
I also became more comfortable using common past expressions in normal conversation.

The lessons showed me how to talk about routines and habits from an earlier time in life.
I learnt to explain activities that happened regularly in the past but have now changed.
The childhood-pet conversation helped me connect grammar with familiar personal memories.
It also gave me practice in comparing my earlier routines with the way things are today.
I understood that the same idea can be expressed through statements, questions and negative forms.

By completing the activities, I paid more attention to sentence order and suitable verb forms.
I found it easier to answer questions about personal history without translating every sentence.
The exercises encouraged me to use complete sentences instead of giving only short answers.
They also improved my confidence in sharing memories and describing changes over time.
Overall, the Interchange practice made past-time conversations easier, clearer and more natural for me.

Project Ideation

Engineering Student Career and Placement Platform

A proposed platform that supports engineering students from choosing a career to preparing for placement. The features below form the plan for the first version.

Project owner	Jason Jacob M
Course	EN25C09 | Professional English I (Lab Integrated)
Project stage	Idea and first-version planning
Target users	Engineering students and engineers planning their next career step
My proposed role	Define the requirements, organise the learning content, build the first version and collect feedback.

The challenge

Career information, learning resources and placement preparation are spread across many websites. Students can struggle to decide what to learn first, organise their progress and connect college learning with the skills needed for a job.

Career uncertainty	Students need a clear view of fields, job roles and the skills each role requires.
Scattered learning	Roadmaps and useful resources need to be organised by year and learning stage.
Profile preparation	Students need practical guidance for projects, GitHub, LinkedIn, resumes and certifications.
Placement readiness	Aptitude practice, coding preparation, mock interviews and internship information need one clear starting point.

The proposed solution

A small, easy-to-use website brings career guidance, year-wise learning roadmaps, profile-building support and placement preparation together. The first version focuses on CSE students, then improves through classmates' feedback.

Student workflow

Explore a career → Choose a roadmap → Learn and practise → Build a profile → Prepare for placement.

A career quiz can help students explore options. Curated resources support learning. Project and profile checklists help students prepare evidence of their skills. Practice activities support interview preparation.

Access and content quality

Plan a browser-based, mobile-friendly website with simple navigation. Review resource links regularly, show when information was last checked and provide a way for students to report outdated content.

11 Project Canvas and Pitch

Planned architecture, feasibility and a 90-second presentation

Technical approach	Use Lovable to build the first website and Python for suitable supporting features. Begin with a CSE roadmap and curated resource pages. Choose storage and hosting after the prototype requirements are clear.
Core modules	Career choices and quiz; year-wise roadmap; learning resources; project and profile guidance; aptitude, coding and interview preparation.
Target impact	Help students make informed career choices, follow an organised learning path and prepare a stronger placement profile.
First-version scope	One CSE roadmap, selected learning links and practical profile-building checklists. Add quiz and practice features in later versions.
Feasibility / pilot	Create the first version, ask a small group of classmates to try key tasks, record their feedback and improve the pages. No completed pilot or user results are reported.
Constraints	Keep information accurate, avoid broken links, use suitable learning resources and balance project work with studies.
Future roadmap	Add progress tracking, more engineering branches, personalised learning suggestions, mock-interview resources and internship information.
Success measures	Check whether students can find their next learning step, complete key website tasks and report that the guidance is clear. Set numerical targets after the first trial.

90-second pitch | 1. The problem - 30 seconds

“Engineering students often have many career questions but no clear starting point. Information about skills, projects and placement is spread across different websites. A first-year student may know the job they want, yet still be unsure about what to learn this semester and how to prepare for it.”

2. The solution - 30 seconds

“My idea is a career and placement platform for engineering students. It will bring career guidance, year-wise skill roadmaps, learning resources and profile-building tips into one website. Students can explore roles, practise skills, develop projects and prepare for interviews through a clear sequence of steps.”

3. Feasibility and next step - 30 seconds

“I plan to start with a small CSE-focused website using Lovable and Python. The first version will include a roadmap, selected learning resources and profile checklists. I will ask classmates to test it, collect their feedback and improve it before adding more branches, progress tracking and placement features.”

NPTEL NOTES / WEEK 1 - LECTURE 1

Week 1 - Lecture 1

Introduction 1: Highlights of Developing Soft Skills

Course: Enhancing Soft Skills and Personality | IIT Kanpur | Prof. T. Ravichandran

Core idea

Soft skills describe habits that help a person interact, make decisions and use technical knowledge responsibly. They include listening, speaking clearly, preparing for a task, working with others and accepting feedback. The introductory lecture reminds learners that a degree is important, but behaviour can determine whether knowledge is understood and applied.

Understanding and interpretation

Practise the combination of a clear message, respectful listening and a useful follow-up. Communication improves when I check that another person understands the intended meaning, not merely when I finish speaking.

My learning and personal connection

The first lesson connects to management because planning is of little use without clear conversation. I can practise explaining a coding idea to a classmate in two or three sentences and then ask what was understood.

Example I can relate to

When discussing a class programming task, I should state the goal, mention my method and listen to corrections before deciding the next step.

Practice activity for this week

Present a 60-second overview of the Simple Calculator project, invite one question, and record one improvement to my explanation.

Learning note based on the provided lecture topics; this is not a claim of verified NPTEL course completion.

JASON JACOB M

NPTEL NOTES / WEEK 2 - LECTURE 2

Week 2 - Lecture 2

Introduction 2: Further Highlights of Developing Soft Skills

Course: Enhancing Soft Skills and Personality | IIT Kanpur | Prof. T. Ravichandran

Core idea

The second introduction connects self-awareness with personal development. Looking at how I respond to pressure, mistakes, disagreements and unfamiliar work reveals strengths and areas for growth. Managing my phone use, improving reading habits, presenting information carefully and maintaining trustworthy relationships are examples of everyday soft-skill practice.

Understanding and interpretation

Preparation should be purposeful: identify the audience, organise the important points, use simple supporting evidence and invite questions. Ethical conduct matters because trust is difficult to rebuild after a careless promise or misleading explanation.

My learning and personal connection

I often have questions when learning C or Python. Rather than avoiding discussion, I can note my doubt, listen to the explanation and write a concise summary afterward.

Example I can relate to

My role as a learner is not just to ask questions but to reflect on the response and practise it independently.

Practice activity for this week

Write one discussion reflection noting what I said, what another person asked and what I will clarify next time.

Learning note based on the provided lecture topics; this is not a claim of verified NPTEL course completion.

NPTEL NOTES / WEEK 3 - LECTURE 3

Week 3 - Lecture 3

Mindset 1: Definition and Types

Course: Enhancing Soft Skills and Personality | IIT Kanpur | Prof. T. Ravichandran

Core idea

A mindset is a collection of beliefs and assumptions that influences how people interpret situations. An optimistic belief may encourage effort, while a restrictive belief may make challenges appear impossible before they have been attempted. A mindset can influence confidence, choices, concentration and reactions to advice.

Understanding and interpretation

Fixed and growth mindsets offer a useful comparison. A fixed reaction treats an initial mistake as proof of permanent inability. A growth-oriented reaction asks what method, preparation or support could lead to a better result. This is not blind positivity: the task may still be difficult.

My learning and personal connection

When my simple calculator gives an incorrect answer, a negative reaction would be to assume I cannot code. A better response is to check the conditions, test examples and correct one issue at a time.

Example I can relate to

If the calculator gives a wrong answer after a division operation, I can inspect input validation instead of assuming the entire program is beyond my ability.

Practice activity for this week

Choose one difficult C exercise and rewrite an unhelpful assumption as a step-by-step practice goal.

Learning note based on the provided lecture topics; this is not a claim of verified NPTEL course completion.

JASON JACOB M

NPTEL NOTES / WEEK 4 - LECTURE 4

Week 4 - Lecture 4

Mindset 2: Learning Mindsets

Course: Enhancing Soft Skills and Personality | IIT Kanpur | Prof. T. Ravichandran

Core idea

Learning is more effective when difficult work is approached as something that can be improved through strategy, feedback and revision. A fixed outlook might avoid hard assignments to protect confidence; a learning-focused outlook attempts a manageable step, examines the outcome and tries an improved method.

Understanding and interpretation

Feedback should be specific and actionable. Instead of saying that I am simply bad at something, I can identify a weak concept, compare my answer with a worked example and revisit it. Small improvements provide stronger evidence than vague motivation alone.

My learning and personal connection

If a website feature is confusing, I can ask classmates to try it. Their comments are evidence about the design, not criticism of me as a person.

Example I can relate to

Comments on the design of the proposed career-guidance site can point to a confusing instruction or missing explanation.

Practice activity for this week

Ask a peer to test one program input, log the error and explain how I changed the solution.

Learning note based on the provided lecture topics; this is not a claim of verified NPTEL course completion.

JASON JACOB M

NPTEL NOTES / WEEK 5 - LECTURE 5

Week 5 - Lecture 5

Mindset 3: Secrets of Developing Growth Mindsets

Course: Enhancing Soft Skills and Personality | IIT Kanpur | Prof. T. Ravichandran

Core idea

A growth mindset develops through repeated and intentional behaviour: setting attainable goals, welcoming correction, learning from peers and measuring progress across attempts. Changing a negative sentence into a hopeful one is useful, but practical action must follow that change of attitude.

Understanding and interpretation

Useful growth goals include a clear outcome, a practice schedule and a way to review mistakes. Progress is rarely perfectly linear. A difficult week can reveal which habit or learning method needs adjustment, rather than indicating that the entire goal is unrealistic.

My learning and personal connection

I want to build leadership skills through small responsibilities. Completing one promised task, asking for feedback and improving the next task is a realistic starting point.

Example I can relate to

Completing one small website improvement each week gives more evidence of learning than repeatedly writing ambitious plans.

Practice activity for this week

Track three attempts at a programming task and identify the specific feedback used between attempts.

Learning note based on the provided lecture topics; this is not a claim of verified NPTEL course completion.

JASON JACOB M

NPTEL NOTES / WEEK 6 - LECTURE 6

Week 6 - Lecture 6

Managing Time 1: Importance and Perceptions of Time

Course: Enhancing Soft Skills and Personality | IIT Kanpur | Prof. T. Ravichandran

Core idea

Time is a limited resource, and people differ in how they value urgent tasks, long-term goals, leisure and responsibilities. The first time-management lecture encourages awareness of how time is actually spent. Without an honest account of distractions and task duration, even a neat timetable can become impractical.

Understanding and interpretation

An effective schedule should include focused study, important non-academic duties, breaks and some flexibility. Keeping a short time-use record for a day can reveal avoidable delays, late starts or unrealistic expectations about how much work fits into one session.

My learning and personal connection

Balancing classes, programming practice and career preparation requires an honest timetable. I can measure where my study time goes before committing to new activities.

Example I can relate to

I may plan thirty minutes for a coding exercise but need more for debugging; recording the actual duration improves the next estimate.

Practice activity for this week

Record one ordinary day in half-hour periods and mark time spent on study, rest and avoidable distractions.

Learning note based on the provided lecture topics; this is not a claim of verified NPTEL course completion.

JASON JACOB M

NPTEL NOTES / WEEK 7 - LECTURE 7

Week 7 - Lecture 7

Managing Time 2: Using Time Efficiently

Course: Enhancing Soft Skills and Personality | IIT Kanpur | Prof. T. Ravichandran

Core idea

Good time management is not the same as remaining busy. It involves identifying important outcomes, estimating effort, prioritising work, reducing interruptions and checking completion. Working on too many tasks at once can lead to mistakes and unfinished activities.

Understanding and interpretation

A practical daily plan lists two or three priorities, places demanding work in a suitable time block and leaves room for unexpected tasks. At the end of the day, comparing actual progress with the plan gives evidence for improving the next schedule.

My learning and personal connection

For my planned career website, I can prioritise a clear roadmap page before adding optional quizzes, so the first version reaches a useful milestone.

Example I can relate to

A useful prototype may need clear career-roadmap content before interactive quizzes or additional interface effects.

Practice activity for this week

List three career-platform tasks, estimate the effort, complete the highest-priority one and review the estimate.

Learning note based on the provided lecture topics; this is not a claim of verified NPTEL course completion.
